DIRECTIONS: Read this passage and then answer questions 1 through 5.

Web Weaver

The ancient Greeks tell the story of a talented but foolish young woman named Arachne. Arachne was well known throughout the land for the beautiful tapestries and rugs she wove. One day at a local arts and crafts fair held in the agora¹, she was busy working at her loom when a crowd began to gather around.

“What vivid colors! Such intricate designs!” exclaimed the crowd. “Truly such talent would rival Athena herself!”

High up in her home on Mt. Olympus, Athena heard the praises of those gathered and, as goddess of arts and crafts, decided to descend to the agora to investigate. Athena disguised herself as an old beggar woman so she could observe Arachne unnoticed.

With each compliment given by the onlookers, Arachne grew bolder and more proud. “Athena would have to work hard to achieve my skill,” she boasted. “My tapestries are superior to all others.”

In her disguise, Athena spoke up. “Foolish child,” she scolded. “Don’t you know how unwise it is to mock the gods? You should beg Athena for forgiveness at once,” warned the old woman.

Recklessly Arachne continued. “I don’t need to apologize for my skill. Why, if Athena and I were to have a contest, I am certain to be declared the better weaver.”

Upon hearing the challenge, Athena cast aside her disguise, revealing her true identity. With a stony glare she declared, “So be it. Let the competition begin!”

Her pride overcoming her fear, Arachne nodded and both began weaving. Rapidly the patterns began appearing on the looms. Athena’s tapestry pictured a scene of the troubles that come to those who anger the gods. Arachne’s tapestry displayed the gods in silly, unflattering ways.

When the goddess glanced at Arachne’s disrespectful design, she could take no more. Eyes blazing, she roared, “I gave you a warning, but you have gone too far! If you are so proud of your spinning and weaving, then that is what you shall do forever.” As soon as the command was issued, Arachne’s body and limbs began to shrivel up until she became a small spider.

Even today, Arachne remains in that form, weaving her webs as a reminder and warning to all those who might dare to challenge the gods.

1. In ancient Greece an agora (ag r) was a marketplace or other gathering place.

Student Council
Desert Path Elementary School
March 26, 20__

Dear Principal Stanton,

The date for our annual Desert Path Pride Spirit Week is rapidly approaching and the Student Council has been discussing some new ideas about how to celebrate and express school pride this year. Since Spirit Week is the week before scheduled testing, we would like to suggest combining student festivities with preparation for testing. We want to assure you that all proposed activities would focus on academics while providing fun for those involved.

Testing time can be very stressful for students and teachers alike, and we believe that a certain amount of diversion after a year of hard work will create a more relaxed atmosphere. Students with less anxiety should perform better than pressure-packed pencil pushers. All kidding aside, we feel our students deserve a change in their daily routine before settling down to the serious task of testing.

Our plan for the week is as follows:

Monday – Math Day would include fun math games in the classrooms and school-wide activities such as estimation to guess the number of jelly beans in a jar, recording times at relay races, competitions for multiplication facts, and measuring to find and compare sizes of items at school.

Tuesday – Reader’s Roundup would focus on books and authors. Students and staff can come dressed as their favorite author or character from a book. This day would be great for the librarian’s famous “Mystery Reader” contest. Older students can share reading time with younger-aged buddies.

Wednesday – Writer’s Day would display student writing from previously held competitions for types of writing like poems, stories and essays. Of course there would be prizes given for outstanding writing in each category.

Thursday – Words Day would deal with vocabulary. We’ve had Twin Day in previous spirit celebrations. Why not hold a Synonym Day where people can portray synonyms with partners by wearing similar costumes?

Friday – No Fear Day would be where we have our spirited assembly to get us ready for testing. The Student Council could even put on a skit showing how all of us at Desert Path are ready for test week.

These are just a few of the ideas we are asking you to consider. We would like to have the opportunity to meet with you and discuss our plan and to hear what ideas you may have for Spirit Week. Please let us know when you can schedule some time to meet.

Respectfully yours,
The Student Council

Writing

DIRECTIONS:

Read the writing prompt below. Use the next page for your prewriting/planning. Then write your draft.

The cafeteria serves some foods people like and some they don't like. Think about three different foods that you would like the cafeteria manager to serve that you can't get now in the cafeteria.

Write a letter to the cafeteria manager convincing her to serve each of the three new foods that you are suggesting.

Your writing should:

- Target a specific audience and purpose.
- Organize clear ideas into a meaningful sequence.
- Be written in appropriate business-letter form.

Remember to edit for spelling, grammar, punctuation, and capitalization.
